

A risk is a challenge that a child can see and chooses whether or not they want to engage in that challenge.

It is when a child pushes their own boundaries and learns through first-hand experiences. If we eliminate risk it can lead to our children's inability to assess danger.

A hazard is something a child does not see, it is usually dangerous.

It is the adults role to identify hazards to children, talk to them about why they are dangerous and remove the hazard.
